1. Adolescence represents a unique period in the life cycle that brings special challenges and opportunities. In this period of exploration, adolescents also consciously start to make choices about their future and develop ideas about their roles in society. Adolescence, thus represents an opportunity to encourage healthy choices and pro-social behaviors. The vital role of a school health personnel is to create a safe and nurturing environment for today's adolescents—environment that build assets while minimizing opportunities for behaviors that endanger health and safety. Specific objectives of this convention are the following:
 - 1.1 Review the life cycle of the adolescent stage.
 - 1.2 Educate school health personnel to encourage adolescents on how to make healthy choices and develop pro-social behaviors during this pandemic.
